The Ijaw is the major ethnic group that populates the Niger Delta of Nigeria. It would seem that the music, dance and masquerades of the Ijaw people emanate from the very core of their geographical, physical environment. Most are a fully riverine community, whose culture and entire way of life is influenced by the sea, rivers, creeks and estuaries that surround it. The people were predominantly fishermen and depended on this trade up until their contact with white missionaries, traders and western culture. As a result, most cuisine contain an assortment of seafood.
